Physicalism and mental causation - pages.uoregon.edu

The only reason we are given seems to be this: if causation is what Kroedel thinks it is, and if physicalism is false, then mental causation is possible only if super-nomological dualism is true. So, the non-physicalist dualist really has to worry about mental causation in order to buy into super-nomological dualism.

Physicalism, mental causation, and the AFR There are, of course, several versions of the AFR. If the opponent is advocating some kind of reductionism, then all the difficulties in providing a naturalistic account of intentionality come into play.

Mental Causation: A Counterfactual Theory // Reviews ...

The Problem of Mental Causation has been with us at least since René Descartes claimed that mind and body are separate substances. If the body is only physical and material, how can a non-physical and immaterial mind possibly act on the body. More importantly, how can a "mental" action or event in the mind be the cause of a physical action by the body? ...
