Thabo Mbeki: The Dream Deferred - TIME

THABO MBEKI AND THE SOUTH AFRICAN DREAM DEFERRED O n the night of Sunday, September 21, 2008 a somber Thabo Mbeki, surrender etched into his impassive face, told the world that he was "obliged" to step down as president of South Africa because he had been fired by his own political party, the African National Congress (ANC).

A LEGACY OF LIBERATION

thabo mbeki: the dream deferred was uncharacteristically expansive: he wished to dispel the notion forth-with, he said, that he did not tolerate dissent. He was an intellectual, a quester, and he urged all South Africans to follow suit, 'to ask and ask and ask'. If we did not get satisfactory answers from him, we were to 'ask and
